Representative Election.

Whose of Bazaar! Your failure by division among yourselves, to elect your entire representative ticket on the 13th inst. has encouraged your political opponents to make a united, stout effort to elect their candidate. To-morrow a new trial takes place. The candidate before you is Samuel J. Foster, selected at a large whig caucus and who only lacked four votes of an election at the recent trial. Come forth in your strength and secure his election. It is no time now to falter or listen to mere personal preferences.

The regular nomination of your political friends and the known ability of your candidate ought to secure an election beyond all question. Let no Whigs stay away from the polls tomorrow but come out in old fashioned style and stick together like a band of Patriots in a good cause.

RANGE, BANGOR, No. 17, September 15th, 1841. Boston.

This number is filled with a variety of useful and amusing matter. James's "Ancient Regime" is continued. There is an etching of the Rev John Newland Maffit, also a sermon delivered by him on the 25th of August last. The "Lamp-lighters' Story," by Boz, is well worth the perusal. We think the readers of this periodical cannot be dissatisfied with it, for in cheapness and interesting matter, we know of nothing of the kind which surpasses it.

It is this being muster day, and our hands performing military duty we are unable to give the address of the Whig Members of Congress. It is an important document, and we shall commence its publication to-morrow.

We give to-day a pretty full account of the return of votes which our readers can examine at their leisure.

[For the Whig and Courier]

Fort Fairfield, Aroostook,
Friday September 10, 1841

To-day, to the joy and satisfaction of the inhabitants of this fine company of United States troops under the command of Capt Van Ness arrived from Hancock Barracks and took military possession of the Fort. Formal delivery of the Block House and premises was made to Capt C O Collins, acting Quarter Master for the United States, by Zebulon Ingersoll Esq the assistant Land Agent. The soldiers take up their quarters in the Block House, but the officers will occupy tents until some suitable and convenient buildings can be erected for themselves and their families.

The morning after their arrival was bright and beautiful, and as the sun rose in its splendor from beyond the highlands, the 'Old Gun' the gun 'of great credit and renown' was brought out, and poured forth its volumes of smoke and thunder welcoming its country's friends and defenders, and bidding defiance to its enemies and the invaders of its soil.

At the first peal from the cannon, up went for the first time our country's banner; hence forth and forever we trust, to float over the unscathed "disputed territory."

The star spangled banner now waves over our own soil under the authority of a powerful and willing to maintain it, the power of the United States of America.

Politicians may say what they please respecting this movement; but it is a fact, and one which cannot be denied, that the influence of our worthy Chief Magistrate, Edward Kent, in obtaining the general Government to assume the responsibility and expense of the Fifth River, and Fort Fairfield posts by sending regular troops there, will do more towards settling the question of the "boundary" than any thing that has been done by any man or any party for the last thirty years. And all this has been done without affectation of Edward Kent, to whom belongs the lasting gratitude of his fellow citizens.

You shall hear from me again at Fort Kent, when I may point out some of the advantages this movement will be to new settlers.

OBSERVER

From Texas The steamer Kingston arrived at New Orleans on the 5th, bringing latest dates to the 2d. The election of President was to take place on the 5th, and but little doubt was entertained of the success of Gen. Samuel Houston. We condense the following from the Picayune.

The volunteers, who went out to cooperate with the Santa Fe Expedition, have returned without having been able to meet the Indians. They proceeded to the place where they were represented to be assembled in a large force, but before their arrival the crops had been gathered, and the village was deserted. They neither met nor heard from the expedition.

The Secretaries who have resigned their situations are great pecuniary sufferers. They have relinquished lucrative professions or pursuits, given up doubtful establishments at home, and opened costly residences at Washington. All this cannot be done, short of pecuniary sacrifices, as well as great personal inconvenience and suffering. [North American.]

Mass has been said of the imprisonment of an American Consul at Matanzas. But it is not that Mr. Green, imprisoned there, is not an American Consul, but only a private citizen of this country, arrested for violation of Spanish laws.

From Florida The correspondent of the Savannah Republican, under date of East Florida, Sept. 7, writes as follows:

The news is still favorable from Tampa Bay. The Indians are coming in daily from all directions and from every band. Capt Holmes, 7th Infantry, pursued the marauding party of Indians that lately attacked the four citizens near Manatee, three days. On the second day he got within sight of their camp and was certain he would surprise them, but to his astonishment just at that moment four adventurous citizens, not knowing Capt Holmes's proximity, went to the Indians camp to reconnoitre, fired a volley, and ran into the prairie. The Indians followed, but, discovering the troops, they instantly fled. Their trail was followed for another day, but was finally lost in an overgrown hammock. Yours, &c

Mr. CRITTENDEN The Alexandria Gazette says that it is thought the President will nominate Mr. Crittenden, late Attorney General, to the seat on the Bench of the Supreme Court, to be made vacant by the resignation of Judge McLean, just appointed Secretary of War. Should this arrangement be made, and Mr. Crittenden be placed upon the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, the situation would be as greatly adorned by his high judicial attainments, as it would no doubt, be consonant with his own feelings.

THE CINCINNATI RIOT. The Cincinnati journals represent the outrages which so recently disgraced their city as having been instigated but by no means permanently subdued. The Republican says that a spirit of lawlessness yet prevails which only awaits the opportunity again to burst forth with redoubled fury. Not the slightest regard to age, respectability or sex was shown in the recent outbreak, and the same spirit of riot and excess yet prevails among a large body of the inhabitants.

THE LADIES' FAIR.

BY T. S. ARTHUR, ESQ.

Gradually Ellen led off the conversation from the fair, and the brother and sister spent an hour together in pleasant communion. The poor need not be unhappy. Let them cultivate gentle affections, while they live daily in the discharge of every duty, and peace will brood like an angel over them. None but the evil need be miserable, and in fact, none but they who permit something of evil to rule in their minds, be their condition in life what it may, are discontented. It was perhaps, an hour after Edward Morton had returned home, that Irvin, his room mate, came in.

"So you have passed through the trial, James," said the former, smiling.

"Yes, and have acted like a fool as I am," he replied, throwing his hat on the table, with an impatient and angry gesture.

"I suppose your pocket is ten dollars lighter than it was?"

"Ten? Yes and double that sum."

"It can't be possible, James," said his friend in surprise.

"Yes, it is possible, though. Am I not a most consummate fool?"

"Well really, James, I am sorry that you have thus suffered yourself to be robbed, for I can call it by no milder name, of money which, in fact was not your own."

"Robbed, did you say? Yes that is what it is, or rather, the term should be swindled. Why, they were like so many hawks after me; and Emma Grant seemed to think I had nothing to do, but to buy her every foolish thing in the room. I am sick of her any how."

"It is all over now, and I hope it will be a lesson to you, Edward remarked. But I would not make myself any more unhappy about it."

"How can I help being unhappy, do you think? Can I forget that old Buckram will be down upon me with his bill before a month passes over, and that I owe two weeks board, which must be paid, and which I intended paying this very night? And if I were to try the trick of forgetfulness, I would soon be roused from such a dream. No. No. The thing is done past recall and now must come the penalty."

"Well, I'm sorry for you, James, but I cannot help you any."

"Don't say that, Edward. You must stand by me, for something, in this tight place. At least, you must spare me ten dollars to give the landlady."

"Indeed, I cannot, James. I paid up for my board this evening, and had but twelve dollars left. Ten of this I carried to my sister, and I have but two dollars with which to pay my wash woman. So, you see, that I cannot help you in the least."

"I wish your sister had the twenty dollars I threw away to-night! Then it would do some good. I could bear the trouble which I know I shall have, if the money spent were to be of any use. But what do I care about the cushions and cushions for old Mr. S. church?"

After a few moments' silence, Irvin drew a long breath, and said, as he rose up and began to pace the room backwards and forwards.

"Well, I have one hope left, that I had for gotten."

"Ah, indeed? And what is that, James?" inquired his friend.

"Why, I've got two chances in a raffle to be had on next Friday night. If either of them wins it may help me a little. If both, I shall get back my twenty dollars."

"Much as I condemn gambling in any shape, remarked Mr. Morton, and still more so, when it is done in the name of religion and charity, I hope you may be successful."

"You cannot hope so more than I do," sighed the young man.

Friday evening soon came round, and Irvin prepared to go to the raffle.

"You intend calling for Emma Grant, do you not, asked his friend Morton, in a positive tone."

"No I do not, Irvin replied, in a positive tone. 'Why, didn't you tell me that you had taken a chance for her in a great racking chair?'"

"Yes, indeed. But she may go and see about it by herself, unless she find some bigger fool than I am to go with her. If I were to win anything, she would suppose, as a matter of course, that it was for her, and perhaps order it sent home at once. O no! As I told you before, I am done with her."

Being now all ready, our young sufferer wended his way to the brilliantly lighted hall in Chestnut st., and mingled with the beauty and fashion there. Perhaps each one present was in some way interested in the raffle, particular and general, to be held here during the evening. They had bought chances in the name of charity, and now each one was eager to know what was to be the reward for so good a deed.

"I am sure that I shall get something handsome," whispered a lady to her husband, up on the stairs as she was leaving.

"And why do you think so?" he inquired.

"O, because I have done so much for the fair," she replied. "I worked a whole month, and stood at one of the tables all through - I think

I ought to have something worth while drawing."

"So you think Providence will favor you for your good deeds?"

"I don't think it would be any more than fair," the lady replied, in a sober earnestness.

Others no doubt thought, and felt as she, but were more guarded in expression.

At last the gambling commenced. The lot of things in which Irvin was interested went off first. The chair soon found an owner. It was a young lady who had been the foremost in getting up the fair. She did not seem at all surprised at her good fortune. But there was many a sneering and many a deprecating word thrown out at her expense. The ottomans came next.

A brief pause, and the name of James Irvin was announced as the fortunate drawer of these prizes.

"Deared but not hurt!" murmured Irvin to himself in an ecstasy of pleasure. "I shall come out even yet!"

"Who is he?" where is he?" exclaimed several voices. And Irvin stepped forward.

"You'll put it up, of course, for the benefit of the fair," said one young lady, taking hold of his arm.

"Of course he will, said another. "Gentle men always do that."

"You wouldn't take such splendid ottomans from the fair for the paltry sum of a dollar and a half," chimed in another.

"Of course he will not," exclaimed a fourth, "he is too much of a man for that. I know by the very expression of his countenance that he will give them back again to the fair. Won't you?"

"Certainly! certainly! Of course I will! What use would the gaudy things be to me? I give them back to the fair," said Irvin, with as good a grace as possible, backing out from his advance position, and again mingling with the crowd.

"Why Mr. Irvin!" exclaimed a lady, immediately in front of whom he found himself standing, "faster Emma is waiting at home for you. She will be dreadfully disappointed. She wanted to come to-night above all things, and fully expected you."

"I am sorry for it, the young man replied, bowing, but it is too late to help."

"Sister will never forgive you for this," resumed the lady.

Irvin again bowed, and withdrew from the presence of Miss Grant, muttering to himself, "then we will be even, for I never intend forgiving her."

The piano stool was drawn by another young man, when the sense scene of coercion was gone through, and he compelled to relinquish it to the fair, to be raffled for again. Really sick at heart, Irvin precipitately retired, and left the fair gamblers to finish their evening's game in their own most approved way. And it was really a painful exhibition of the folly of poor human nature. Whoever drew a prize of any consequence was either forced to relinquish it to the fair, or become an object of remark and envy.

Finally the whole affair closed, and there was scarcely an actor in it who was not disappointed, pained, mortified, or chagrined at something which occurred.

"There was fully enough money raised to purchase pew linings and pulpit curtains built up at the expense of decency and all the admitted rules of propriety," and what was still worse, at the expense of the very first principles of christian charity.

We will now pass by James Irvin, and let him get out of his trouble the best way he can, and look in upon another actor in the fair - one who held the situation of a patroness in assisting to get it up.

cemetery, and the season will permit the interment of the property of the cemetery divided into six shares and any owner of such shares is also owner of the shares, to be paid on receiving the first or third of three dollars for six months. The first will be published quarterly for the present.
A short time will be a monthly paper in this city, and all improvements that can be made to time made.

Airtight Stove Improved.
Cast and Sheet Iron.
WITH every variety of improvement, selected with great care from the western cities.
The subscriber having some experience in the manufacture and use of the above named Stove, has been enabled to add some very valuable improvements whereby they are rendered more convenient and durable.
He now offers the Stoves either as made heretofore or with these improvements. The Airtight Stove is decidedly the most convenient and economical Stove ever offered to the public. A large number of them have been sold, and they give universal satisfaction.

Adams's Venus Water.
THE true Remedy for the Sovereign Restorative! the grand product of 1841! The subscriber informs the public that after FOURTEEN YEARS of study, ten of which have been years of immense labor and difficulty, he has discovered the only true remedy against the loss, the sovereign restorative in case of a deficiency, and the grand product of that most beautiful ornament of "the human form divine," THE HAIR!
That it may be known that this Venus Water is an invaluable article, I will state that in the first years of my labors upon it, its application to the head for two consecutive seasons, was necessary in order to establish a good growth of hair, but now only one season is required, so successful have been my improvements upon it! And I have the prudent satisfaction of knowing that in the City of Bangor alone, three hundred and forty heads which were once bald, can, by the heavy growth of hair upon them, bear witness to the wonderful effects which this Venus Water has produced within eighteen months!
If The Venus Water is for sale by the proprietor at his room over the Post Office in this city.
Bangor, March 11. T. D. ADAMS.
For sale by D. BUGBEE, Agent, No. 2, Kendu-
